Randy,

I have been trying to figure out another way but I did not receive my SSI and of course have not been working till this week. This was a one time not receiving my SSI due to they take out so much for me still working after I took my SSI early.

So I am so behind on bills light bill, gas, water, car insurance, car payment and the list goes on with getting needing tires as well like no choice.

I was wanting to see if anyway I can get help this month to keep these bills from getting anymore out of hand.

I would need the amount I normally get from SSI which is 2500.00.

This is a one time asking for more help other than the rent.

Also. If you could let me know you received the email.

Thank you

Vicki Shepherd

Email received.
I'll discuss and let you know.

Is you daughter contributing anything to your living expenses?

Please breakdown the expenses for me.
Car payment?
Insurance?
Electric Utility bill?
Water bill?
Gas bill?
Any other?

Received.

Vickie, we've discussed your situation before and it doesn't seem to get much better, even when you are working.

You really cannot afford to stay in that home with high rent and monthly expenses, and pay almost $1000 a month for auto and insurance.

You said that the thought of moving was too overwhelming and it is. However, If you will agree to move to a more affordable place, I will help you coordinate that and we, the church, will help with the move.

I am sure after this my daughter said she is going to be able to pay rent with the job she has it has just taken her longer to get situated. She has told me next month she is able to pay rent. If not followed through she knows we have to move.

I am in the situation now because of my SSI being held back and not working. I am now working and that was a one time holding SSI.

Thanks
Vicki Shepherd
